A NEW APPROACH

When you attend this timely zoom webinar, you will discover a new approach in the field of problematic sexual behavior that is becoming a game changer for the way couples heal after betrayal.

Unfortunately, out of control sexual behavior does exist in our community, often causing divorce and the breakdown of families. Rabbonim have been working valiantly to support sex addicts in their recovery. What's missing is understanding the unique and nuanced impact of betrayal trauma on the partner, the coupleship and the family. This is imperative to prevent further damage and promote healing.

THE MISSING PIECE FOR RESTORING SHALOM BAYIS AFTER BETRAYAL

Rabbi Sonnenschein

Rabbi Yosef Sonnenschein, a 24 year resident of Waterbury, CT, spent years teaching in the Waterbury Beis Medrash and High School, and has been the Rav of K'hal Bnai Shalom of Waterbury for nearly 20 years. He is currently the Menahel of Landers-Beis Medrash L'Talmud in Queens, NY.

In addition to his other rabbinic duties, he spends a significant amount of his time providing support and guidance to young adults, couples, and families.

Dr. Jake Porter

Dr. Jake Porter, LPC, NCC, CSAT-S, CMAT, CCPS, is an expert in the fields of relational dynamics, leadership development, sex addiction recovery, and trauma treatment. He has extensive training and education in social affective neurobiology. His new "Couples Centered Recovery," helps couples learn to connect deeply to experience real intimacy. Connection is the pathway of reaching the goal of reconciliation.

What you will discover by attending

- Important tools for guiding a couple dealing with problematic sexual behavior
- Qualifications to look for in therapists when referring for treatment
- The unique role the Rav/Rebbetzin can play alongside the treatment team
- Halachic and hashkafic implications related to betrayal/sex addiction
